

Applications of the Ershov difference hierarchy in the computable algebra and the complexity theory

Marat M. Arslanov (Kazan', Russia)

Recently the Ershov difference hierarchy finds an extensive use in applications of the computability theory. In my talk I will give a survey of most important results of such applications in the model theory, computable algebra and the computational complexity theory. Also some related open problems will be discussed.